Dr. David Satcher completed his four-year term as the 16th Surgeon General of the United States in February 2002. He also served as Assistant Secretary for Health from February 1998 to January 2001, making him only the second person in history to have held both positions of Surgeon General and Assistant Secretary for Health simultaneously.

Dr. Satcher is the director of the Center of Excellence on Health Disparities and also the first Poussaint-Satcher-Cosby Chair in Mental Health at the Morehouse School of Medicine (MSM). From December 2004 to June 2006, Dr. Satcher served as the Interim President of MSM, and from July 1 through July 30, Dr. Satcher served as President of MSM. In January 2002, Dr. Satcher was named the Director of the new National Center for Primary Care at the Morehouse School of Medicine in Atlanta, Georgia. Before assuming this post in September 2002, he served as a Senior Visiting Fellow with the Kaiser Family Foundation, where he spent time reflecting and writing about his experiences in government and consulting on public health programs.

From 1993 to 1998, Dr. Satcher served as Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and Administrator of the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry. Before that, he was President of Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tennessee, from 1982 to 1993. Prior to that, Dr. Satcher served as professor and chairman of the Department of Community and Family Medicine at Morehouse School of Medicine. Earlier Dr. Satcher served on the Faculty of the King-Drew Medical Center and the University of California at Los Angeles School of Medicine and Public Health.

As Surgeon General and Assistant Secretary for Health, Dr. Satcher spearheaded the development of Healthy People 2010 which included the elimination of racial and ethnic disparities in health as one of its two goals. He also released 14 Surgeon General's reports on topics that included: tobacco and health; mental health; suicide prevention; oral health; sexual health; youth violence prevention; and overweight and obesity issues.

Born in 1941 in Anniston, Alabama, Dr. Satcher and his wife, the former Nola Richardson, a poet, reside in Atlanta, Georgia. He is the father of four grown children and two grandchildren, all of whom he is very proud.
